WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, Jan. 2, 1888. At the close of the year it is probduced fifteen and a quarter millions, and for the whole year it was decreased a little more than one hundred and and seventeen million dollars, the largest reduction being made in June and November.

Many of the Congressmen who visited their homes during the recess have returned, and others are we offer to new or renewing daily arriving-all looking with impatience to the reassembling of Congress, when the committees will be announced and the work of the ses sion will begin in earnest. It is understood that Speaker Carlisle has finished his most tedious and troublesome undertaking-that of making out his committee lists, and with his great experience, it is confidently believed that his work will be acceptable, although many members will be disapointed at their assignments. Those not familar with the workings Powderly's illness has been long of Congressional ambition, cannot conceive of the jealousies and bickerings of aspiring statesmen in such matters.
